Interviewer: We're talking to an education expert about some of the theories that are commonly believe about the way we learn.

Professor, it said that you are either right-brained or left-brained. Could you tell me whether is this true!

Expert: Well, although it is commonly accepted that we have a dominant side of the brain which dictates how we learn, actually, there isn't any research that supports this theory. according to a study recently, however, researchers did find that certain brain funktions were more likely to occur in either the left side or the right side, but they also found lots of variations in these findings at the same time. It appears that both sides of the brain are involved in even the simplest actions.

Interviewer: Is there really one exercise that makes you cleverer.

Expert: In the same way as exercise and diet, there are always new fashions in the field of learning, too. It believed that doing crosswords will keep your brain active even when you are very old. however, there isn't a lot of evidence to support such theories. Instead, it now is think that our brain development is dependant on the experiances we have. Experiance is more important than any exercises we do.

Interviewer: Do you agree that we only remember 10% of what we read, and 90% of what we see, hear or do?

Expert: No, I disagree with that completely. This theory introduced many years ago, and although it sounds as if it could be true, there has never been any research to prove it.

Interviewer: It is often said that practise makes perfect. I agree with that, Do you mind telling me what you think!

Expert: I have exactly the same opinion as you. our brains coordinate a complex set of actions. As we repeat a task over and over again, the coordination becomes smoother and quicker. In the end, after a lot of repetition, we can perform the task perfectly, or at least, almost perfectly. So in order to improve your skill at something, you need to practice frequently, and get lots of feedback so that you practise correctly too.

Interviewer: Yes, you're right. That's very important.

My name is Asma. I'm doing an online postgraduate course in education. I chose this online course for several reasons.

firstly, I don't live near a university, so I can't attend classes.

Secondly, I'm working as a teacher at the moment, so I need to fit my studies in around my work. So working online has the advantages of overcoming these problems. It does take quite a long time to study for the final exam – you have to have a lot of self-discipline to study on your own, in your own time. I'm really enjoying my course, and I'm going to go on to do a phd next. I love the fact that you can continue studying even once you've completed school or university. There's never any need to stop!
