This is a description of what it might feel like for some people with ASD (autism spectrum disorder) to go to a shopping centre. While people's experiences vary a lot, one of the key issues for many individuals with autism is a hypersensitivity to sights, sounds, smells and tastes, which can make a simple activity, such as going shopping extremely stressful. Some people are able to cope with this kind of sensory overload reasonably well, though the stress might eat away at them inside. But for others, they end up having a meltdown – in other words, they get upset or angry. This can make it difficult to fit in with or to keep friends because other people just don't understand the pressure that has led the person with autism to act in this way. It can also lead to people with autism having problems at school or with holding down a job, as they may come across as unreliable or bad-tempered.

- One major challenge for individuals with autism is their extreme sensitivity to -----.
A. emotions B. physical activity C. sensory input D. logical thinking
- A shopping centre might be overwhelming for someone with ASD due to the ----- they experience.
A. poor lighting B. sensory overload C. social boredom D. physical demands

In order to help people understand what it's like to have autism, could Virtual Reality (VR) help? Virtual Reality is a computer-generated simulation of an experience, which is seen in 3D, and which can feel almost exactly like really being in that situation. According to Chris Milk in his TED talk, Virtual Reality connects humans to other humans in a way which can change people's perceptions of each other. Perhaps in response to such ideas, the National Autistic Society has developed a VR experience to help people understand what sensory overload feels like. People can watch the video using special 3D glasses, which take them more fully into the experience. So far, it has had six million views, and the comments certainly indicate that it's having a powerful effect.

11. Virtual Reality is a -----simulation of an experience.

- A) physical B) natural C) computer-generated D) hand-made

12. Virtual Reality allows users to feel like they are -----in the situation.

- A) watching from afar B) lost C) virtually detached D) really

13. Chris Milk suggests that Virtual Reality can -----how people see each other.

- A) hide B) change C) block D) reduce

14. The National Autistic Society created a VR experience to show what -----overload feels like.

- A) ignore B) avoid C) understand D) forget
18. Comments on the video suggest that it has a -----effect on viewers.
- A) mild B) negative C) powerful D) boring
19. Virtual Reality creates experiences that are viewed in -----dimensions.
- A) one B) two C) three D) four
20. The main goal of using VR in this context is to increase -----for people with autism.
- A) sympathy B) awareness C) entertainment D) confusion

The potential impact of VR in helping us to understand one another and the world around us is exciting. For example, some people went through the virtual experience of chopping down a tree. Afterwards, the researcher 'accidentally' spilt his drink and those people who had been 'chopping down trees' reached for fewer paper napkins, suggesting that their experience had subconsciously encouraged them to stop wasting paper.

VR has also been used to give people the experience of being disabled or being in a flood. But can these experiences really help us to walk in someone else's shoes? A major difference between simulated and actual experiences is that we volunteer to put on the VR headset. We can break off at any time and go back to our normal lives, whereas the people whose lives we're experiencing don't have that luxury. And, while we can experience the sounds and sights of a flood, we don't come up against the same difficulties.

21. The use of VR can help people understand both each other and the -----around them.

- A. government B. news C. world D. technology

22. In one experiment, participants who experienced chopping down a tree in VR used ----- paper napkins afterwards.

- A. more B. fewer C. the same number of D. no

23. The reason people used fewer napkins was because the VR experience had affected them -----.

- A. physically B. consciously C. subconsciously D. emotionally
