Proposals have been announced to build a "green" city on the outskirts of Amman. The city will eventually house around one million people and will be the biggest development of its kind in the world. The water used by the city, and all the waste created by it, will be recycled. The city will generate its own electricity. Amman is the perfect location for such a city because its climate is not as extreme as other cities.

Jordanians already have good habits when they use nature's resources. Air-conditioning systems, for example, are used less in Jordan and the average Jordanian uses around 145 litres of water a day.
