Many classrooms now use a whiteboard as a computer screen. As a consequence, teachers can show websites on the board in front of the class. Teachers can then use the Internet to show educational programmes, play educational games, music, recordings of languages, and so on.

In some countries, tablet computers are available for students to use in class. Therefore, students can use the tablets to do tasks such as showing photographs, researching information, recording interviews and creating diagrams. Tablets are ideal for pair and group work.

Teachers can perhaps ask their students to start writing a blog (an online diary), either about their own lives or as if they were someone famous. They can also create a website for the classroom. Students can contribute to the website, so for example they can post work, photos and messages.

We all like to send emails, don't we? Email exchanges are very useful in the classroom. Teachers can ask students to email what they have learnt to students of a similar age at another school. They could even email students in another country. As a result, students can then share information and help each other with tasks.

Another way of communicating with other schools is through talking to people over the computer. Most computers have cameras, so you can also see the people you are talking to. In this way, students who are studying English in Jordan can see what students in England are doing in the classroom while they are speaking to them. You can also use this system to invite guest speakers to give talks over a computer. If you had this type of lesson, the students would be very excited.

Teaching values

In most schools including Pre Primary, Primary and Secondary schools, Value education is treated as a separate course of study. It is important to seed values into the mind of the kids at early ages to make them noble human beings.

Parents are considered the first teachers for the child. Schools provide students with a set of values to help them behave well in their community. Therefore, it is the responsibility of both parents and teachers to pass on to their children good values which should make them good citizens and right individuals in the future which the world needs.

The world is full of people who have lost their values and ethics. The organisations and other institutions should take initiatives to remind the values to each individual of the society and everyone should take pride and practicing those values no matter the age, sex, social status and any other factor.
